

ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT STRATEGY

2021 to 2024

Newmarket

THERE'S A PLACE FOR YOU HERE

The Town of Newmarket is known for its innovative and open community. Local company executives praise the collaborative nature of the entrepreneurial eco-system and the “co-opetition” between companies that creates better outcomes for businesses, employees and clients. Newmarket is home to hundreds of locally owned, vibrant businesses, including several dozen in the historic Main Street area, that complement medium and large businesses who are international leaders in the manufacturing, technology and health industries.

The 2016-2020 Newmarket Economic Development Strategy focused on initiatives within the three themes of innovation, collaboration and urbanization. This resulted in a number of successes that strengthened the economic and community development foundation of Newmarket, including:

- The creation of Newmarket’s own broadband company ENVI, a business-focused internet service provider, which is currently expanding its fiber network and attracting new business customers.
- The development of York Region’s first purpose-built, multi-residential rental building since the 1970’s, supplemented by the implementation of a supportive planning approval process on the Yonge Street and Davis Drive corridors.
- The attraction of several wealth-creating businesses between 2016-2020, highlighted by multi-national electronics manufacturer Celestica.
- A successful and innovative marketing awareness and media relations program with substantial media hits including the Huffington Post, Foodism, Breakfast Television, CP24, the Toronto Sun and others, resulting in 60 individual stories on five main topics, with 14.4 million impressions received calculated using Media Ratings Point.
- Recognition as a Top21 Intelligent Community in the world by the Intelligent Community Forum (ICF).

THE EVOLUTION OF A STRATEGY

This 2021-2024 Economic Development Strategy builds on the success of the previous strategy. Newmarket will continue to pursue initiatives reflective of the Town's growing reputation as a leading innovative, collaborative and urban community by focusing on enhanced marketing, community vibrancy and fostering the entrepreneurial spirit.

This strategy was created through consistent and passionate effort by the Mayor and Council and the business leaders who volunteer as advisors on the Newmarket Economic Development Advisory Committee (NEDAC). The support of the broader business community, many of whom enthusiastically participated in the March 2020 Economic Development Summit, is also acknowledged. Through these combined efforts, this document accelerates the exciting momentum that has been achieved within previous strategies while strengthening Newmarket's status as a leading urban community within the Greater Toronto Area (GTA).

COUNCIL STRATEGIC PRIORITIES

In 2018, Newmarket Council endorsed six strategic priorities intended to assist Council and staff in providing the community the best opportunities to become even more vibrant, innovative and sustainable. The pillars were established through a review of the Town's Community Survey Results and engagement sessions with staff and Council members. The first three pillars reflect a specific emphasis on Economic Development, indicating a strong desire by Council to continue to support and grow the business eco-system.

Creating an environment for an engaged, accessible and inclusive community.

ECONOMIC LEADERSHIP AND JOB CREATION

Maintaining long-term financial sustainability while ensuring a thriving community.

NEWMARKET ECONOMIC DEVELOPMENT ADVISORY COMMITTEE (NEDAC)

“NEDAC’s members represent a cross section of business leaders and entrepreneurs dedicated to promoting business growth and enhancing the incredible community vibrancy that is unique to Newmarket. By providing important strategic advice to our Town on the many initiatives that impact businesses, we contribute to the development of our collective strategic direction for the future of Newmarket. The 2021-2024 Economic Development Strategy champions our business environment by supporting new start-ups and entrepreneurs, while celebrating the dynamic and supportive community we are so proud to call home.”

- DONNA FEVREAU, NEDAC CHAIR

NEDAC is an advisory body that helps Council advance its Strategic Priorities by providing critical analysis, feedback and advice from a business and community perspective on economic challenges and opportunities.

NEDAC’s strategic support helps the Town achieve its local economic development goals. In 2018, NEDAC expanded from nine committee members to fifteen to better reflect the diversity of business types and demographics in Newmarket. This has resulted in a strategy with perspectives from Newmarket’s largest private and public employers across all sectors, growing entrepreneurial companies, retired executives from multinational technology companies, as well as the Newmarket Chamber of Commerce.

COVID-19 IMPACTS ON THE LOCAL ECONOMY

Newmarket's economy displayed excellent year over year job growth in 2019 across most industries resulting in over 45,000 jobs, strong real gross domestic product and local commercial assessment increases. The Town was a leader in job growth within York Region with employment increasing by 6.15% over 2018 (18% over the past decade). Total employment in 2019 was the highest ever registered in Newmarket.

Significant commercial and industrial investments also occurred and strong multi-residential development growth is anticipated as major projects advance along the Yonge Street and Davis Drive corridors. Supported by a sustained multi-media marketing program, Newmarket spent the final years of the previous economic development strategic plan building a growing reputation as a leading urban centre within the GTA. In mid-March 2020, Newmarket's businesses were significantly impacted by public health restrictions imposed by the COVID-19 pandemic. By July, Newmarket's real GDP dropped by over 7%, unemployment rose significantly to 8.2% from 5.7% in 2019, and the participation rate (those actively working or looking for work) dropped by 6%. While these trends were worrisome, Newmarket's economic diversity emanating from its role as the regional centre of York Region somewhat buffered the economic impact, as its unemployment rate was significantly lower than the rest of the Toronto Census Metropolitan area (13.2%), in which Newmarket is included. At the end of 2020, Newmarket's businesses were still being impacted by the restrictions and lock downs imposed as a result of the COVID-19 pandemic.

Previous Economic Development strategies prioritized the development of the corridors (Yonge Street and Davis Drive) via multi-story residential and office development. New offices would provide the jobs of the future as traditional employment land inventory in the community shrunk, while the residential condominium and rental market would provide affordable housing choices for the employees required to sustain the growth industries of the community. While still important to the future sustainability of Newmarket, data suggests a level of uncertainty permeates the short to medium term office market.

COVID-19 IMPACTS ON THE LOCAL ECONOMY (CON'T)

The Conference Board of Canada reported in the summer of 2020 that 42% of businesses/employers surveyed had implemented a hiring freeze, 10% had a permanent workforce reduction and 27% had a temporary workforce reduction. Two in three employers had 60% of their employees working remotely, despite re-opening permissions from the Provincial and Federal levels. Over half of employers indicated that they planned to keep employees working from home until the risk of COVID-19 transmission was greatly reduced, with some companies publicly stating this will be a permanent trend for at least a portion of their workforce.

The latter half of 2020 also saw a large uptick in the office sublet market in the GTA as companies scrambled to shed office space to reduce costs. As such, the demand for office space, especially in the geographic margins of the GTA like Newmarket, is less certain than indicated in previous reports and strategies.

At the time of this report (Q1, 2021) the local economy is expected to see signs of recovery in the latter half of the year, with more residents beginning to seek work and unemployment rates trending downwards. The Conference Board projects Newmarket's job numbers to fully rebound to 2019 levels between 2022 and 2023. Retail trade and the accommodation and food services industries are expected to take the longest to recover, possibly not until 2023. Manufacturing, professional, scientific and technical services are also expected to grow slowly until once again reaching pre-pandemic levels. Newmarket's economic diversity and strength in the relatively stable Institutional sector (Public Administration, Health Care and Social Assistance, and Education), which comprise 36% of the total workforce, should shield some of the overall community impact.

The short-term effects of COVID-19 are difficult to quantify but the data suggest Newmarket's employment numbers should once again reach 2019 levels within the four year time frame of this strategy. The pandemic triggered a shift in economic development priorities in 2020 away from the advancement of macro-economic, longer-term growth initiatives to supporting micro (those employing less than 5), small and medium sized businesses as they struggled to adapt to the pandemic. As a result, the focus of this strategy is multi-faceted and includes efforts ranging from direct micro-business support for at least the short-term, to investment attraction, continuing to build an outstanding community that will attract new residents and employees, and support for entrepreneurial initiatives.

With ongoing strategic advice from NEDAC and Council’s proactive leadership, Newmarket will continue to achieve a healthy balance of jobs to population for our residents.
